

Namath To Quit Football

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath, quarterback star of the Super Bowl champion New York Jets, announced today he is quitting football under threat of suspension unless he disposed of his interest in a midtown lounge.

"Commissioner Rozelle (Pete Rozelle, commissioner of pro football) gave me two days to get out of the restaurant business or be suspended," the 26-year-old former University of Alabama player told a hastily called press conference.

"So I am retiring—finished," Namath, who was in a highly emotional state, was asked if his differences with Rozelle could be resolved.

"I hope so," he replied. "The last thing I want to do is quit football."

Namath said he was given a list of undesirable persons coming into his restaurant, a place called Bachelors Three, located at 62nd and Lexington Avenue, in which Namath holds one-third interest.

The lounge was the scene of the surprising announcement and became a madhouse as close to 200 news and camera men swarmed into a small room. Few could hear Namath's comments.

The football star said Phil Iselin, president of the Jets, Coach Weeb Ewbank and an unnamed member of the FBI had told him that the restaurant was going to be closed.

"I was told the place was being used by bookmakers," the quarterback said. "I have done nothing wrong. They told me I have done nothing wrong. But because I am a football player, I had to get out."

"We got in touch with the district attorney's office and told them we would cooperate fully. Two days ago Mr. Rozelle and Mr. Iselin told me that they were going to close down the restaurant. They gave me no reason."

The announcement came as major league baseball was investigating holdings in Las Vegas gambling casinos by owners of major league franchises.

Rumors of Namath's retirement have been rampant since he led the American Football League champion Jets to a 16-7 upset victory over the Baltimore Colts of the NFL in the Super Bowl game at Miami in January.

He has been bothered throughout his career with knee trouble. He is reported interested in a movie career.

A close associate said the football star planned to leave immediately for Hollywood to do a movie. Sonny Werblin, former owner of the Jets and the man who signed Namath to a $400,000 contract, is said to have made the movie contacts.

The former University of Alabama quarterback from Beaver Falls, Pa., who signed a $400,000 contract to turn pro in 1965, was in and out of hot water during his turbulent career.

As a college player, he was repeatedly disciplined by Head Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, who called him "the greatest individual athlete I ever have seen."

He drew similar penalties from the Jets for frequenting East Side bars in Manhattan.

During one of those escapades, he got into a fight with a magazine sports writer. The writer sued him for $310,000, charging Namath and two companions with assaulting him.

In April of this year he was arrested in Miami and charged with drunken driving. He was cleared of this charge but had to pay $50 for speeding.

Escapees Captured

Leon J. Haselhorst, left, and Dale E. Gaddis are guarded by Sheriff Emmett Fairfax (with rifle) and Trooper Joe Dayringer after Fairfax captured the pair Thursday evening. In the background are cattle on the Raymond Chancey farm on Route C about 3 1/2 miles south of Sedalia, where the men were captured. The farm, ironically, is the one on which Sheriff Fairfax was raised.

Escapees are Captured On Familiar Territory

Sheriff Emmett Fairfax might as well have stayed home during the 30-hour manhunt that ended about 6 p.m. Thursday with the capture of the last two of the three men sought at the beginning of the hunt.

The sheriff captured the two men on his old homestead, where he was raised and where his mother, Mrs. Raymond C. Chancey, now lives south of Sedalia. The sheriff lives nearby.

They have been identified as Leon J. Haselhorst and Dale E. Gaddis, escapees from a work detail at Kanapolis State Park, Kan., where they were working while in custody of Kansas State Industrial Reformatory officials on May 29.

The manhunt, which involved bloodhounds from the Algora Reformatory, about 10 Highway Patrol, Sheriff's Department vehicles and a Highway Patrol plane, along with authorities from Benton, Cooper and Saline Counties, began with a holdup near Marshall Junction Wednesday afternoon. One of the three men sought, William Monteer, Belton, was captured soon after their car was shot up near the junction of Highway 135 and Highway 50.

The hunt went on throughout Wednesday night and Thursday, with the officials checking out various leads during the day. The two hunted men had disappeared into the dense undergrowth along Flat Creek south of Smithton.

Thursday Saline County officials filed armed robbery charges against Monteer and he was turned over to those authorities.

The climax of the long search came about 5 p.m. Thursday, when authorities received several calls from residents about 3 1/2 miles south of Sedalia on Route C where the men had again been spotted.

Authorities converged on the area and started searching the underbrush.

Sheriff Emmett Fairfax armed with a carbine, went back several hundred yards north of the area being searched by his deputies and Sedalia Police to a vantage point where he could see a large area.

Arnold Priemeyer, who lives close by, observed the subjects and informed Fairfax, who apprehended the men in brush on the farm.

Fairfax and Highway Patrolmen took the subjects to Sedalia Police headquarters for questioning and processing.

Monteer's bond has been set at $15,000, according to Saline County Sheriff Henry Hoff. Haselhorst and Gaddis were released to Sheriff Hoff late Thursday evening on warrants for armed robbery.

Date in July Is Likely For Bond Election

Sedalia city councilmen are working on an ordinance to set a date for the $1,200,000 general obligation industrial bond issue, for Permaneer Corporations' new plant here, it was learned at a meeting Friday. A tentative election date of July 8 is being sought.

Permaneer representatives in Sedalia Friday indicated that the firm expected to be in full operation in the first quarter of 1970, producing outdoor laminated siding entirely new to the firm's production line.

The new manufacturing plant will be located on 40 acres north of Main Street and east of State Fair Blvd., on property purchased from C. L. Turner.

Red Attacks Show A Rise in Intensity

SAIGON (AP) — The enemy stepped up attacks across South Vietnam sharply in the last 24 hours, the allied command reported. Viet Cong rockets and mortars hit more than 100 allied bases and towns, while at least 464 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were reported killed in ground fighting.

Incomplete reports said at least 40 Americans were killed and more than 100 wounded in the ground fighting or by the enemy shelling. South Vietnamese casualties were said to be light.

There was speculation that the upsurge in enemy activity was an attempt to influence the conference between President Nixon and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu on Midway Island Sunday.

"It's just a little bit more pressure to perhaps cause the meeting at Midway to come up with some sort of concession," a spokesman for the U.S. Command commented. "It is to let the participants at Midway and the world know they are still capable of shooting off a lot of rockets even though the majority didn't do much."

The shelling was the heaviest since May 11, when North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops shelled more than 200 allied bases and towns. The shelling then was a big factor in a sharp jump in U.S. casualties that week to 430 killed.

U.S. headquarters said 46 of the rocket and mortar attacks Thursday night were significant, meaning they caused damage or casualties, but "over-all, casualties and damage were light."

A communique said 19 of the significant attacks were against U.S. forces or installations.

South Vietnamese headquarters said there were 82 "enemy-initiated incidents" directed at government military units or civilians. A spokesman said rockets and mortars fell into 10 provincial capitals and 16 district capitals, he said at least three Vietnamese civilians were known dead and 45 wounded.

The targets Thursday night included the big Bien Hoa base 15 miles northeast of Saigon, the headquarters of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division 40 miles north of Saigon, and the headquarters of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division 28 miles northwest of Saigon.

One rocket hit a South Vietnamese ammunition dump five miles north of Saigon.

Says Fair Dependent On Funds

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Dexter D. Davis said today the 1969 Missouri State Fair at Sedalia may have to be cancelled if the Legislature fails to restore funds cut by the Senate last month from the 1969-70 budget.

The Senate cut $148,875 from $169,000 in operational funds for the fair that had been approved earlier by the House. Gov. Warren E. Hearnes had asked for $190,000. The Senate action left only $16,546 for the fair's operation this year.

Davis said the money would be needed to prepare the 336-acre site for the nine-day exhibition set to begin Aug. 16. He said contracts had to be let for food, electrical work, plumbing and other services.

Davis said four or five days of rain could put the operation in the red. If that happens, the commissioner said, he would have to go to the Legislature for emergency appropriations to pay the contractors.

"That could not be done before next year," he said. "It would not be morally right to expect anyone to wait that long for his money. Besides, some of them may be hard to get if they know there is a chance they will have to wait."

"In addition, I have to sign a personal note for $40,000 worth of change before we can even open. If the fair doesn't gross enough to pay our other bills I would be on the hook for the full amount."

The state fair has been an annual event since 1901, with one year's exception during World War II. Paid attendance last year was over 300,000.

Theme for the 1969 fair is "the big one" and Davis said it will be the largest ever held in Missouri—if it is held.

An Air Search Is Conducted For a Plane

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — At least 15 military planes and two Coast Guard vessels continued searching the western Aleutian Islands today for an Air Force reconnaissance plane missing with 19 men aboard.

Sgt. Larry Helmerick, public information officer for the Alaska Air Command at nearby Elmendorf Air Force Base, said today's search was to be concentrated near Amchitka Island, where the plane was located when it made its last radio communication.

Its last estimated position Thursday was 250 miles east of Shemya on what was described as a routine flight from Shemya to Eielson Air Force Base near Fairbanks, Alaska.

The Pentagon said Thursday night the plane, an RC135, is powered by four turbo-fan engines and carries electronic reconnaissance equipment. The Pentagon said the RC135 was not shot down.

The missing plane's mission may have involved checking Soviet radar and possible monitoring Russian radio communications, but there was no official word other than that the flight was routine.

Military officials in Alaska would not speculate on whereabouts of the plane or elaborate on its mission.

The plane last was heard of 30 minutes after take-off.

Return to French Coast For a D-Day Observance

Henry B. Jameson, publisher of the Abilene, Kan., Reflector-Chronicle, landed with American forces on D-Day at Omaha Beach as a correspondent for The Associated Press. Now he has returned for the anniversary observance.

By HENRY B. JAMESON

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — Hundreds of American veterans of World War II have returned to the scenes of the greatest invasion of all time for 25th anniversary celebrations that stretch for 50 miles along the Normandy coast.

Dozens of American, British and French generals and other high ranking officers, headed by Gen. Omar Bradley and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, were on hand. They stood erect, taking salutes like old times. Although many were wearing civilian clothes they were easily recognized.

Because of the anniversary celebrations at a dozen or more coastal towns, the Americans memorial service at Omaha and Utah Beaches were moved up to the eve of D-Day.

The American observance officially started with an old-fashioned picnic lunch given by Ambassador and Mrs. Sargent Shriver on a hillside overlooking once bloody Omaha Beach.

It was held in a recreation chalet that the French government has constructed just below the cemetery where 11,000 American soldiers are buried, and within the shadows of a ravine up from the beaches where the first breakthrough was made.

Hamburgers and hot dogs with baked beans were served to 700 guests, including British, Canadian and French officers and their wives, who enjoyed the American cookout.

Many American fighting units held reunions here after chartered trips from the States. Scores of old soldiers were accompanied by their wives and children and thoroughly enjoyed telling them how it really was 25 years ago.

While a vast majority of the battle scars have been erased from both the countryside and the landing beaches, it did not take anyone who was there long to recognize "X MARKS THE SPOT."

Open Jury Hearing Into a Fatal Crash

A jury hearing in connection with an accident on Highway 65 south of Sedalia Feb. 18, 1968, in which five persons were killed, began in Circuit Court Friday morning.

The hearing, according to attorney James T. Buckley in a talk to prospective jurors, is actually five cases being heard at once for the purpose of determining who was driving the vehicle.

The damage suits, all filed against Clifford E. Brownfield, 1105 East Fifth, total some $250,000. All were filed by relatives of the persons killed in the accident. Brownfield was owner of the 1966 Ford Fairlane involved, and was reportedly in the car at the time of the accident.

The accident occurred at the spot commonly referred to as Whispering Oaks, on a curve about three miles south of Sedalia. Killed in the accident were Jonita Noland, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard L. Noland, Warsaw; Charles H. Hoehns, 18, son of Carl Hoehns, Sr., Warsaw, and Mrs. Opal Huebner, Green Ridge; Daniel M. Ridenour, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Ridenour, Green Ridge; Dale Eldon Baslee, 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon E. Baslee, Route 1, Green Ridge; Margo Lynn Bonner, 16, daughter of Claude E. Bonner, Warsaw, and Mrs. Lucille Porter, Marshall.

According to reports of the accident, the car went off the roadway and literally exploded in the group of trees there. All of the occupants were thrown out of the vehicle, with bodies and debris from the car scattered over a half-acre area.

Brownfield, who was reportedly in the car, was found by Sedalia police officers later in a car near Broadway and Grand, suffering from various injuries. He told the officers he did not remember anything from the time the group left the Smith Country Music Barn, just south of Sedalia, and the time he was found by police. The car in which Brownfield was found had been reported stolen from Kenneth Onwiler, Lee's Summit, who was visiting his son, Dennis Onwiler, who lives in the Whispering Oaks development.

Vandalism at Parks Serious, Says Coutts

Jack Coutts, park superintendent, appealed today to park patrons to help stop, or at least report, acts of vandalism that have caused an estimated $500 in damage in city parks over the last two weeks.

Coutts said Centennial Park has been hardest hit, with a wire backstop on the ball diamond ripped up, lights broken out and a new $33 bench "chopped to pieces." He said Housel, Liberty and Vermont Parks also have been vandalized lately.

For a plumbers' contract for the same period of time. These things enumerated, along with a number of others, are things we could find not real justification for and thus reductions were made accordingly. Just to list one more that seemed absurd to us was $6,000 for bed linens."

Patterson's committee trimmed $148,875 from a House-passed appropriation of $169,000 for the fair operating fund this year. A joint committee of both houses is currently working on a compromise version.

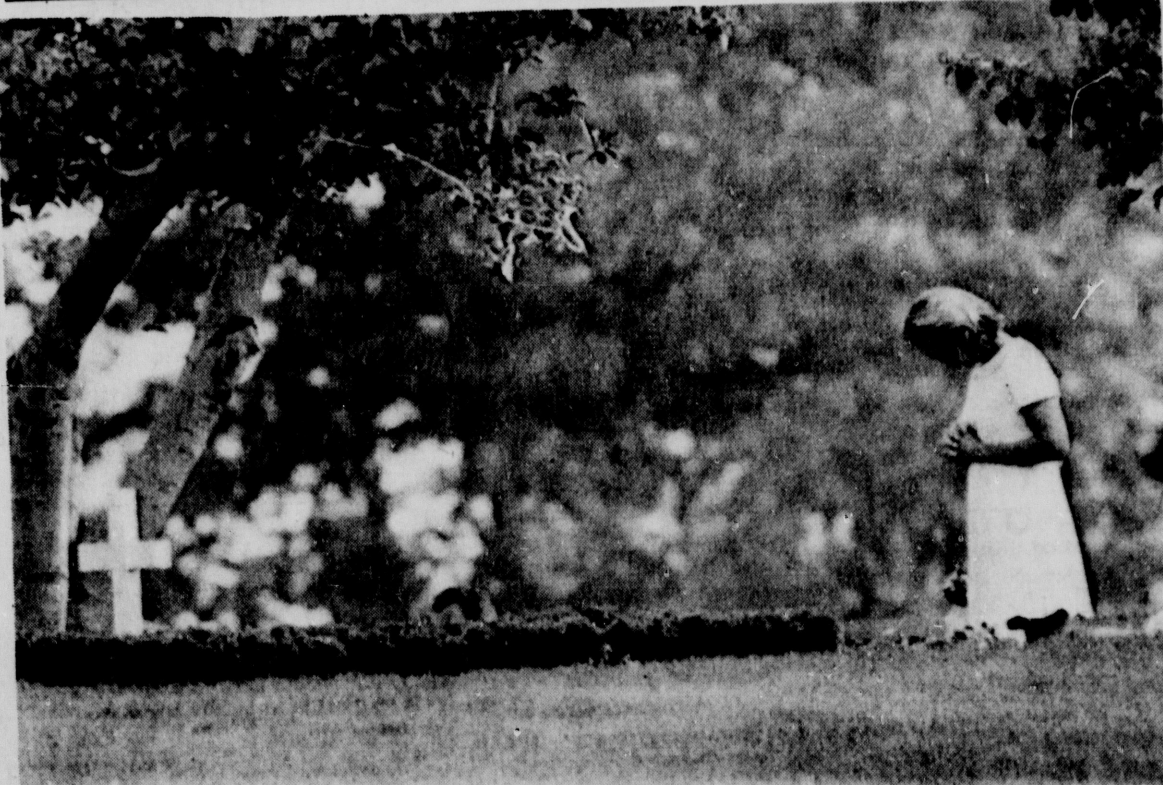

W. C. Askew, fair secretary, called Patterson's remarks "ridiculous." He cited the plumbing and electrical contracts and said they covered year-round maintenance and repairs on the Fairgrounds, and not just the 10 days of the fair.

Askew also said the request for food covered such items as the press party prior to the fair, Farm Family Day lunches, food for the Youth Building and meal tickets for 4,400 high

Spiritual Renewal Hoped For

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Graham, the tall, affable North Carolinian who has preached to more people than any evangelist in the world's history, is getting set for a return crusade in the nation's biggest city—with chastened expectations.

"I think I'm more realistic about the possibilities this time," he said. "I don't expect New York to be shaken."

But as he prays, studies and relaxes in the southern sun, trying to shake off a chest cold before the crusade begins next weekend, he still leaves the chance open for it to catch fire and start a wide spiritual restoration.

"If ever there was an hour when that was needed, it's now," he said in a telephone interview. "It's the only answer to the dangerous disorders tearing at our country. It could happen if the communications media picked up the cause and ran with it."

In the 10-day crusade June 13-22 in Madison Square Garden, Graham plans to aim his appeal particularly to the restive generation of modern youth.

"I've about given up on the older people," he said. "They've assumed that technology, science and material affluence would solve all their problems. But the young know better."

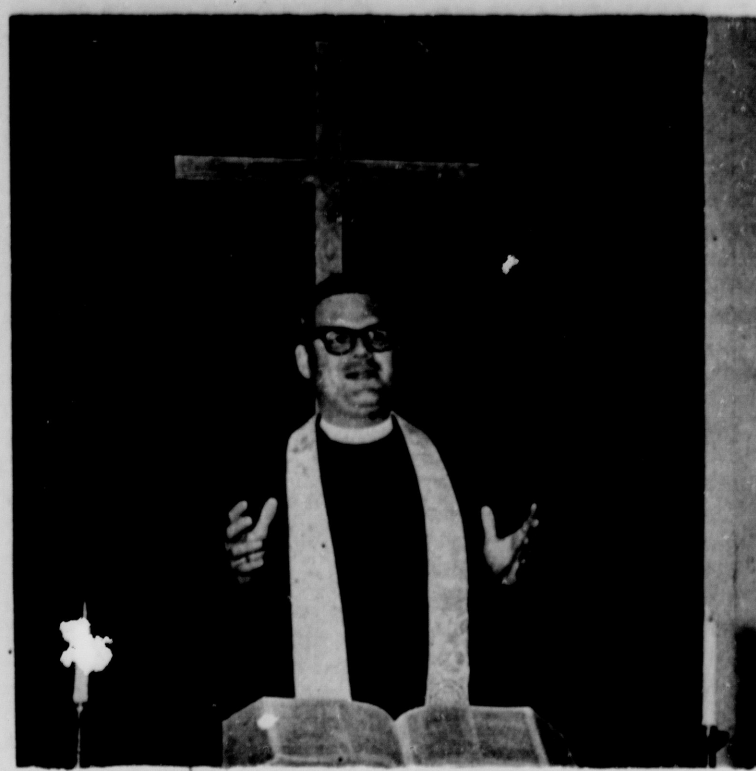

"They're the ones who are responding these days. They're in revolt against the organized church, but not against Christianity. They're looking for purpose and meaning in their lives."

As a supplement to the nightly rallies here, a new feature will be a huge "coffee house," set up in nearby Manhattan Center, where the young can gather afterward and talk in an atmosphere of psychedelic lighting and amplified folk-rock music.

There also will be several special "youth nights" in the Garden services. Graham notes that in recent crusades about 70 per cent of his hearers have been under 25.

To Graham, now 50, his crusade here comes in the 20th year of his globe-girdling career of mass preaching rallies that have made him the best-known and most widely heard evangelist in the annals of Christianity.

He has preached in person to 40,006,872 people in about 200 campaigns on every continent.

New Minister

The Rev. Denis Ray Craft is the new minister at First Methodist Church. Rev. Craft originally came from West Plains, where he graduated from high school. He taught chemistry and biology in high school for one year and then entered Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University, and graduated in 1966. He comes to Sedalia from St. James United Methodist Church in Joplin. He is married to the former Sue Austin and they have one son, Matthew, 9 months old.

'Minireligions' Spring Up Throughout the U.S.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In a world of minicars, miniskirts and minirebellions, the environment today also is producing an assortment of minireligions.

That's the term which a New York publisher applies to various devotional divergencies now showing up in American culture. Church scholars and sociologists also have cited an upsurge of odd new strains of religiosity.

It's a reaction against scientific rationalism and a "search for nonrational ways of coping," says Dr. Holmes Welch, research associate of the Center for the Study of World Religions at Harvard University.

Referring to the variety of curious religious-like manifestations now current, which depart from conventional faiths, Melvin L. Arnold, president of Harper and Row, told a recent meeting of religious publishers:

"Minireligions may be exerting more influence today than traditional religions. Perhaps we may have been focusing too narrowly up to now in assuming religiosity meant only the standardized, traditional kinds."

He noted the rising popularity of astrology, spiritual mediums, the widespread cult of escapism in drugs, the cult of violence, and the heavily accented cult of sex.

"We are inundated and drowning in what the Greeks called the religion of Eros," he said of the contemporary sex obsession.

The Rev. Andrew M. Greeley, a Catholic sociologist of the University of Chicago, says the modern generation, in revolt against scientism, is so intrigued by the sacred that it "on the way to becoming superstitious."

"The popularity of witchcraft and astrology, contemplation and mysticism, vegetarian diets and the tarot cards shows how obsessed with the sacred some of the younger generation really is," he writes. A church historian, the Rev. Dr. Martin E. Marty, of the University of Chicago Divinity, also ticks off a list of some of the proliferating cults in "The world of private religious expression," saying:

"America, 1969, has millions of advocates, devotees or half-believers in astrology, the cabala, drugs, ESP, fortune-telling, horoscopes, I Ching, Karma, LSD, mysticism, nirvana, occultism, peyote, quietism, reality therapy, seances, T-groupism, Unishads, the void, witchcraft, xylomancy, yoga and Zen."

In addition, there are "126 nationalisms, the religions of communism and free worldism, of Black Power, of left and right," Dr. Marty told the meeting of the Religious Publishers Group of the American Book Publishing Council.

There also are the spreading "charismatic" groups, stressing glossolalia, or speaking with tongues, the Spiritual Frontiers Fellowship, investigating parapsychological phenomena, the crowded Soka Gakkai meditation centers on the West Coast.

Back a few years ago, Dr. Marty noted, some theologians were talking about the world moving "into a secular era of 'postreligious man and postreligious culture,'" but instead, he said there are signs of a "new religiousness."

"On the short range, the secular trend certainly continues," he said, but "on the long-range view, ominous and promising new quasireligious, mythical and symbolic forces are to be expected."

He said this includes the "nut groups and faddists," but he added: "The human story seems to be too complex, too passionate to be sustained without some sort of 'religious' meaning quest."

As for the traditional Judeo-Christian heritage, he said: "Whatever is coming will imply a fusion of elements in the Jewish and Christian traditions with a new style of consciousness, sensibility and social organization. Something institutional will survive, but it will be transformed."

Hold Outdoor Services At Warsaw Theatre

On June 1, 1969, the Sky-Vu Drive-In Theater, Warsaw, became the setting for special open air services this summer. The drive-in worship services provide a "come as you are" approach since the members of the family may remain in the cars during the service.

The services will begin at 7:30 a.m. and will be held throughout the summer, ending on Sunday, Aug. 31, 1969. Services will be led this year by pastors of the Lutheran Church of the Warsaw area and choirs from these churches will provide the special music for each service.

To be Paid Despite Unusual Activity

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The New York State Court of Appeals upheld Wednesday a $912 workmen's compensation award to a New York City man who broke his leg when he did a jig in a moving elevator.

In seeking the compensation from his employer, Harcourt, Brace and World of New York City, Robert Bletter had told the state Compensation Board that he performed the dance to demonstrate good spirits because his job as associate editor was going well.

The board ruled the dance, on the employers' premises while Bletter was returning to work from lunch, was not an unreasonable activity in view of his feelings.

Ted Jackson, Lincoln, Neb., currently enrolled in McCormick Theological Seminary, arrived in Knob Noster Friday to serve as the summer intern of Knob Noster Presbyterian Church, assisting the Rev. James W. Williams, pastor. Jackson, his wife and their infant son will establish temporary residence in Knob Noster.

Americans Cutting Back On Their Savings Rate

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — With inflation now accelerating to a rate well in excess of 5 per cent a year, Americans are reducing the amount going into savings accounts, are cashing savings bonds, and are borrowing on insurance policies.

These are among the ways in which households, hard pressed in the midst of plenty, are attempting to offset swiftly rising prices and taxes.

This week the government announced that for the sixth straight month redemptions of savings bonds and freedom shares exceeded sales in May. The outflow was $12 million, compared with an influx of $36 million a year earlier.

At the same time, the rate of savings by American families is falling. Personal savings as a per cent of disposable income dropped from 7.1 per cent in 1969's first three months.

The records of savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks show clearly what is happening. Savings and loans had withdrawals in April of $520 million. Mutual savings banks lost deposits of $200 million in the same month.

Similar evidence of financial strain is shown by records of life insurers.

Almost all large companies report steady increases in policy loans. And the Veterans Administration reports a similar experience with the National Service Life Insurance policies.

For the first three months of 1969, the Institute of Life Insurance reports, the dollar value of policy loans issued was 23 per cent higher than a year earlier, and indications are that the high rate persists to this day.

Dieting Has Become Popular Thing to Do

NEW YORK (AP) — Do you need to go on a diet?

About one out of every three adults you meet seems to be either on a diet, planning to go on a diet, or fighting conscience pangs because he started a diet but hasn't been able to stick to it.

To be on a diet is an "in" thing. People who are of normal weight are uncomfortable because they make uncomfortable those around them who aren't of normal weight. So they, too, go on a diet just to be in style.

So the question arises, is it really necessary for you to go on a diet? Here are a few ways to tell. You probably don't have to go on a diet unless—

When you tie your shoes in the morning, you notice that the distance of your feet appears to have increased.

Your enemies start calling you "skinny."

When you get a medical examination, the doctor has trouble feeling your liver.

You make a check of the calories you are consuming, and discover that you are spilling more of them on your necktie at lunch than your teen-age daughter eats all day.

No matter how few people are standing with you on a bus you still feel a bit crowded.

When you race to the refrigerator to grab a beer during a television commercial, you come back to the set carrying two cans instead of one.

To determine whether you need a fresh shine, you stick your shoes out one at a time because it is too much trouble to bend over and look at them.

As you sit down in an easy chair, you sigh: as you try to struggle up from it, you grunt.

It is getting harder to button the collars of shirts that always seemed comfortable before.

You start receiving mysterious invitations through the mail to join a health club.

After climbing into your car, you take several deep breaths as if you had just ascended Mt. Everest.

If you drop a penny from your pocket, you let it roll away; if you drop a nickel or a dime, you ponder for five full seconds before stooping and picking it up.

The sandwiches you make as a snack before retiring are half an inch thicker than those you made 10 years ago.

When you stand at the beach on a bright day, small children crawl gratefully into the shadow cast by your stomach so they can escape the sun's glare.

Yes, you do need to go on a diet—no matter how many false pals tell you they never saw you looking better.

Drivers' Vehicles Damaged

A dispute over who will drive EZ Haul trucks from Sedalia to National Car Rental marshaling points has been given as the reason for vandalism to two automobiles parked on Industrial Drive near the EZ Haul lot Thursday night.

The two cars had been left on the street across from the truck park by men now on truck delivery assignments. Charles Edwards, night watchman at the truck park, called police early Friday morning and asked an investigation into suspected vandalism to the cars. The officers found six tires slashed, a rear view mirror broken and a radio antenna damaged.

The dispute erupted early this week when a new contract was offered the men who drive the vehicles away. Under the old contract, drivers signed contracts on an individual basis, to deliver the trucks to the marshaling points and return to Sedalia by their own means.

This proved unsatisfactory to company officials, who said the men took "certain liberties" with the trucks, sometimes arriving late and returned late to Sedalia to drive another vehicle away.

Under the new contract the trucks, with the drivers still under individual contract, are to be escorted to the marshaling point by an experienced full-time company employee, who will return the drivers to Sedalia by whatever means the company deems best. The company hopes the new method will attract a "higher caliber" type of driver, according to a spokesman.

The trucks are furnished by the Mike O'Connor Chevrolet-Buick-GMC firm here and the bodies are manufactured and installed by the Parkhurst Manufacturing Co., then turned over to EZ Haul. Several thousand of the units have been processed here this year, and several thousand more are being processed.

The truck drivers are not union members. Off-duty police officers have been hired to patrol the truck park to prevent further vandalism to trucks and cars belonging to drivers on the road.

Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said that about noon Thursday a group of EZ Haul trucks going south out of Sedalia were being held up to a slow pace by two vehicles driven by some of the "disgruntled drivers" who had not been rehired.

The sheriff said one of the vehicles was driving slowly in front of the trucks, which were traveling in convoy under control of a full-time EZ Haul employee, and the other was harassing the truck drivers by pulling in and out of the convoy. At one time traffic was backed up for about two miles, Fairfax said.

Fairfax said he pulled the drivers of the harassing vehicles off to the side of the highway and warned them to stop. The harassment halted at that time, but was resumed later in the evening by the same people. Fairfax asked the Highway Patrol to issue an item notifying all patrolmen to watch for such harassment as the convoys progress.

Construction Figures Show Minus Signs

NEW YORK (AP) — There were more minus signs than plus figures in Missouri April contracts for future construction when compared with the same month a year earlier.

Total construction was down 15 per cent at $113,769,000 in April 1969 as compared with $134,186,000 in contracts in April 1968. Residential construction contracts were $46,479,000 compared with $59,991,000 a year earlier, a drop of 23 per cent. Nonbuilding contracts were $25,402,000 compared with $41,154,000, down 38 per cent.

Only the nonresidential figures were up with contracts for $41,888,000 in April 1969 compared with $33,041,000 in April 1968, a hike of 27 per cent.

For the year compared with the corresponding first four months of 1968 total construction contracts were up 35 per cent with 1969 figures of $463,286,000 as against $342,459,000. Nonresidential contracts gained 56 per cent with $184,493,000 as against $118,172,000. The nonbuilding contracts element was up 80 per cent with $128,399,000 as against $71,347,000.

Marijuana Evidence 'Lacking'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The board chairman of the National Science Foundation says there is no scientific evidence that smoking marijuana is harmful or addictive.

In fact, says Dr. Philip Handler, the information available now indicates the opposite may be true.

"It is our puritan ethics which says we shouldn't do this rather than science which says we should not, at the moment," Dr. Handler told a House appropriations subcommittee in testimony released today.

Handler said it still remains a scientific problem to decide whether marijuana is dangerous to society. He likened it to alcohol and said a similar decision would have to be made if alcohol had just been discovered.

Similar statements touched off a controversy in 1967 when they came from a top health official in the Johnson administration.

Dr. James L. Goddard, a commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said then that as a physician he was not satisfied that medical justification existed to prohibit the use of marijuana.

He went further than Handler, however, and condemned laws against the use of marijuana as too severe and medically unjustified.

Release of Handler's testimony comes at a time when the government is in the midst of a nationwide campaign against marijuana and narcotics. Gerald N. Kurtz, director of the drive by the National Institute of Mental Health, said upon launching the campaign: "Our primary aim is to arm young people and their parents with the facts to help them resist pressures to experiment with drugs—marijuana and LSD."

Dr. Handler, in his testimony to the subcommittee, said there is no scientific proof that the use of marijuana can lead to addiction to harder narcotics.

"This is a problem which requires very clear and insightful investigation of the facts," he said.

"The evidence that marijuana is addictive is not conclusive at all," he said. "Quite the opposite as far as I can make out."

Dr. Handler said the use of the hallucinogenic LSD has dropped off sharply among young people since it was established that the drug can cause chromosome damage.

Chavez Bases Hope on 'Love of Justice'

DELANO, Calif. (AP) — As new grapes grow in the vineyards, Cesar Chavez and his union members are busy organizing the second season of what they hope will become a nationwide consumer boycott of California table grapes.

"The love of justice in the hearts of other Americans is still our last and best hope," Chavez says. His United Farm Workers Organizing Committee has been trying since 1965 to win recognition by grape growers as a workers' bargaining agent.

But the growers contend that Chavez does not have the support of the majority of the workers, that the workers are not oppressed as he maintains and that this summer's harvest will not be severely hurt by any boycotts or strikes. The grapes will be ready for picking in early July.

"How in the world did they get the grapes picked last year if Chavez has the support he says he has?" asks one farmer.

The long, bitter dispute not only has driven Chavez' people and the growers into polarized camps that don't communicate but also has split politicians, clergymen, townspeople and many of the workers themselves.

And there is no sign of a settlement.

In fact, the organizing committee says it now has extended its boycott to table grapes grown in Arizona.

Chavez said he sent telegrams to all Arizona growers April 9, saying the committee represented a majority of their workers and calling for a meeting "to effectuate recognition."

He said he had not received a reply, and that Arizona grapes now are also under boycott.

Chavez spends much of his time in the run-down union headquarters in bed, convalescing from a spinal bone disease and a kidney ailment aggravated by his 25-day fast a year ago.

"I sent letters and proposed elections," he said in a quiet but angry tone during a recent bedside interview. "Now it's too late. We're not boycotting for the right to just have elections."

"All we need is just one meeting. That's all it took with the wine producers."

He said the workers have no job security, are poorly paid, lack disability benefits, that some growers use pesticides harmful to the workers, that some growers have no sanitary toilet facilities in the fields.

But he said back when "La Causa"—the movement—began the farm worker averaged $1.10 an hour whereas now some get $1.90 and all the table grape growers are paying higher wages.

"I'm convinced our activity has prompted the increase," Chavez said.

After bitter strikes in 1956 his group got union contracts with a dozen wine and raisin producers but with just one large table grower, DiGiorgio Corp.

One of the world's leading producers 10 years ago, DiGiorgio since has sold all its vineyards. Anti-Chavez people say it was because of the union.

The growers, of which there are about 70 in the Delano area in southern San Joaquin Valley, say they are not antiunion but that they are against the closed shop. They are afraid of strikes at harvest time, of an increasing influx of South American grapes.

Lou Caratan, who with his father operates a 1,000-acre farm, talked about the dispute. "My workers stayed in the fields," he says. "With the boycott, Chavez is trying to tell us: 'We can't organize your workers, but we will make you wish we had.'"

He said there have been no elections "because Chavez wants elections only on his terms. It's also our understanding that union membership is mandatory."

"I've never had any talks with him. The only contact was a letter saying, 'I represent your workers. That's ridiculous.'"

"If there were strong local support for him I don't see how we could withstand his efforts. To hurt us there had to be a shortage of help. There wasn't and I don't think there will be this summer."

The union contract with the wine and raisin producers has a charge for nonunion members but does not force them to join, a union official says. It provides a minimum of $1.62 an hour.

Wages are a key issue.

A growers pamphlet says that in New York State, where many stores refused to stock California table grapes, farm workers earned 24 cents an hour less than the average of $1.90 in Kern County. The South Central Farmers Committee says the average hourly pay is $2.20 at harvest time.

"We live by the year, not by the hour," Chavez retorts.

A grape picker's average annual income, according to the Kern County Farm Bureau, is $4,500. There is employment directly connected with grapes about eight months of the year and other farm work is available during slack grape periods, the bureau says.

"We're not starving," says union pickers, "but the farm workers are on the very bottom."

Another question open for heated debate, as indicated by Caratan's comment, is how much support Chavez and his union have among others workers.

"Chavez' union discriminates against those who aren't Mexicans," a 25-year-old nonunion worker charges. Chavez denies any discrimination. But he does agree that he lacks strong support from white farm workers.

"I don't really know why the Anglo workers are against us. I suppose you can't blame them after what happened in '49 and '50," when braceros brought in from Mexico broke strikes by domestic workers.

The growers show pictures of Mexican-Americans in the vineyards and maintain that persons who manned picket lines in the past strikes were "outsiders, clergymen, hippies, campus militants and paid professionals."

'Emmy' May Have Matured

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Emmy comes of age on Sunday night—or will she?

The 21st awards of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences will be handed over Sunday at 10 p.m. EDT over CBS, and it remains to be seen whether the ceremonies will reflect a maturity on the part of Oscar's younger sister. Last year's affair fell far short of being a triumph admits TV Academy President Seymour Berns but he promises that the 1968-69 awards will be better.

Berns is a pipe-smoking television veteran who directed one of the first Emmy winners (a girl ventriloquist with a dummy named Jack Splinters) and later directed Jack Benny and Red Skelton. Now he's in charge of the burgeoning TV enterprises of the entertainment giant National General Corp.

"We're going back to some basic fundamentals with this year's show," Berns reported. "The first principle is that an awards show should be an event. It has the two elements that are television's best attributes: it happens now; and it deals with people's emotions."

"An awards program can't compete with an entertainment show. Any variety show has the facilities and time to do a much better job with entertainment, and any such attempts are bound to be compared unfavorably to the awards telecast."

"That doesn't mean we won't have entertainment elements in the Emmy show. But they will be generic and not offered solely to entertain; they will make sense in the context."

Many critics have failed to make any sense out of the multiplicity of Emmy categories, and Berns admitted that has always been a problem with television.

"Perhaps we could make the awards simpler but that would mean stepping on a lot of toes," he remarked. "This year we tried an innovation by announcing the news and documentary awards early. We did this because news was never more important than it was in 1968. By knowing the winners in advance we could show pieces of the shows and make them more meaningful than if we merely read the list of nominees and the winner."

Not a bad idea from the practical side either; there were 145 nominations in the news-documentary divisions.

After years of being presented as a banquet, the Emmys will be presented Sunday in a theater—the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium from which the Oscars moved to the Los Angeles Music Center—and Carnegie Hall in New York. Berns cited reasons for the switch: a theater gives the show a better look; the audience pays attention better; the dinner following the awards has always been a letdown. This year a champagne reception will follow.

lines and maintains the growers used migrants and what they call "green carders," workers from Mexico who come by special permit to work a short time. The growers answer the migrant labor charge by producing payroll records they say prove that 70 per cent of the workers in the fields at the peak of last year's harvest were from the Delano area and the rest from other parts of Kern County.

The union claims a 2,500 year-round membership and 5,000 members at harvest time. There are about 20,000 farm workers in the county in all kinds of farm jobs, according to the Farm Bureau.

The strike cry of "La Huelga" will be heard again in the vineyards in July, Chavez says, but adds that the future of the union depends on a nationwide consumer boycott.

Work organizing the boycott is going full blast. In union headquarters 8 p.m. one night recently, Elaine Elinson, 21, typed boycott lists and instructions aimed at stores and chains that continue to stock California grapes. She had just returned from Sweden where she helped longshore unions stop the unloading of three ships carrying grapes, which were eventually unloaded at Hamburg, Germany. Juanita Brown, 24, was busy answering a stream of telephone calls. Others ground out publicity releases.

"We feel encouraged," Juanita said. "We have people from Delano in 50 cities." She listed Chicago, New York, Boston, Detroit, Baltimore and others as among those where stores have agreed not to stock the green Thompsons, black Ribbers, purple Muscats and Concord.

Juanita has pictures she says show dumping of grapes at Lou Caratan's farm. She said the farm could not sell them, and that over-all the boycott cut 10 to 15 per cent into the grower's profit.

But the growers say they were unaffected by last summer's boycott and look toward July with confidence. And Caratan denies dumping any grapes because he couldn't sell them.

Cool Welcome in Store For Next US Astronauts

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The first men to set foot on the moon will face two weeks of quarantine when they return to earth, before there will be any welcoming ceremonies. They'll also get a cold shower of iodine disinfectants.

These were among the precautions outlined by a group of scientists Thursday. The steps are aimed at insuring that the returning astronauts do not contaminate the earth or its atmosphere with lunar particles.

Dr. David J. Sencer, head of the National Communicable Disease Center, described the danger as "remote but still possible."

Sencer and other members of the special interagency committee on contamination, told a news conference of plans to rid the astronauts of any moon germs which may exist. The space voyagers would be exposed to lunar contamination during their mission of collecting up to 50 pounds of rock and dirt for study.

Both astronauts who will walk on the moon surface scheduled for the Apollo 11 flight in July will discard their special gloves and boots before they leave the moon.

"There'll be a little pile of American litter right next to the American flag," commented Maj. Gen. J.W. Humphreys, director of space medicine for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

Once the astronauts return to their ship, they will expose plant and animal life to lunar specimens to check for adverse reaction. However, Sencer said, the bodies of the astronauts themselves are the most likely hosts for hostile bacteria, virus or parasites.

At splashdown, a Navy frogman equipped with special clothing including a mask and air filter will hand the astronauts specially designed bacterial isolation garments.

Clad in the suits, the Apollo 11 astronauts will step into a raft filled with disinfectant. The frogman will then spray more of the iodine compound disinfectant around the spacecraft's hatch and on the astronauts. The spacemen also will be given filter masks.

Hoisted aboard a helicopter and kept in isolation during the flight to the recovery ship, the astronauts will enter a trailer which will be flown to the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston. A lunar receiving laboratory has been established there.

Some 18 physicians and other scientific personnel also will be inside the lab during the quarantine period at Houston.

Wastes from the sealed laboratory will be burned or funneled into special tanks to insure the quarantine, Sencer said.

"Charlie Brown," the spacecraft that carried Apollo 11 astronauts into lunar orbit, is back where it was manufactured at the North American Rockwell plant in Downey, Calif., for a press showing. Observers at North

Invasion Almost Failed

BAYEUX, France (AP) — "What people don't know is how really close the Americans on Omaha Beach were to turning around on D-Day. The truth is I didn't know when I wrote 'The Longest Day,'" said Cornelius Ryan.

Ryan, whose book about the Normandy invasion has sold 10 million copies in the past 10 years, is among those who have returned to the scene for the 25th anniversary of the landing on June 6, 1944.

He said he had the feeling that something was "missing—not quite put together"—as he wrote about the invasion. But he said he learned about the near failure at Omaha Beach only after his book was out. The knowledge came to him in hundreds of hours of postpublication conversation and investigation.

For Ryan, the success of the invasion hinged on one hour of decision by Gen. Omar Bradley on Omaha Beach, where virtually no progress had been made six hours after the landing at dawn.

"Bradley will deny it to his last days, but around noon at Omaha we were getting nowhere and thinking of pulling out," Ryan said. Back in England, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower already had prepared a one-sentence communique announcing the failure of the attack. Ryan said.

"Looking at what the consequences would have been, the best thing you can see is another invasion, but one that would have taken 18 more months to prepare if the first one failed," Ryan continued.

"In that time, the Nazis might have sued for peace and we might have been forced to let them off on something approaching their terms. Or, then, if the invasion were delayed, we probably would have met the Russians at the French-German border."

Ryan said he had a "corny, unprofessional-sounding" explanation of what got the Americans moving at Omaha around 12:30 p.m. and taking firm hold around an hour later.

"Finally, guys started just getting tired of being hit and not moving. A sergeant kicked someone in the pants. Another man said he preferred getting killed going up the beach rather than sitting on it. Does that sound like junk to you? That's the way it was, though. There's no better explanation."

Once the Americans had left the beaches and reached the hedgerows and meadows beyond, "the chances were infinitely smaller for them to be driven back," Ryan said.

Rioting Joins the "R's"

Notwithstanding that protocol calls for dignity in addressing our congressional and general assembly members, we can't resist using a familiar salutation when referring to our Fourth district Representative as "Congressman Bill" who officially is Hon. William J. Randall.

Wednesday we commented on his inclusion in the Congressional Record of an editorial on "The Yahoos" appearing in the Benton County Enterprise.

However, Congressman Bill in his preface had some comments of his own that amplify what many of his constituents are in agreement with and will approve:

"In my own college career back in the early 1930's, I recall there may have been some students who might have demonstrated because there were not enough jobs available to enable them to work their way through college. One of my staff members told me this morning that the most frequently heard gripe during his college days was that smoking was not permitted in dormitories.

"Many of the complaints from campuses today involve issues that cannot stand the light of thorough examination. No student has ever been promised a perfect education under completely ideal conditions. All that can be promised is an opportunity for all who want it to get an education. The scores of enactments by this Congress in recent years, involving Federal commitments in the billions of dollars, have served to back up this promise. But the "yahoos" today seem bent on tearing down our educational institutions and destroying their facilities as fast as the taxpayers can build them up.

"The real losers, of course, will be the students who bury themselves in their studies instead of those who hide their frustrations in outrageous dress, asinine demands and actions that are destructive of all that has made this a land of opportunity. Another group of losers are the taxpayers who foot the bill. But the heaviest losers — if there is no reversal of current trends on too many campuses — will be future generations of Americans, deprived of leadership training by today's campus preoccupation with devastation rather than education.

"In no fewer than five acts of Congress last year provisions were included for cutting off Federal funds to students and institutions of learning when rioting joins the other three "R's" and makes a fourth "R" of education. But to make these suspensions effective, college administrators must make certain findings. So far, there has been a deplorable hesitancy on the part of college administrators in this respect."

Well said, Congressman Bill.

Rocky No Longer Hero to the Latins

By DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — The failure of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's mission to Latin America is more serious than the headlines indicate, and the headlines have been pretty bad.

The situation is comparable to the closing days of the Eisenhower administration when anti-American riots in Japan became so dangerous that President Eisenhower, then in Manila, had to cancel the remainder of his trip through the Far East.

Today Nelson Rockefeller, who for years has been a great hero in Latin America, has had to cancel his trip to Venezuela, a country where he has built supermarkets, and where he owns a hotel, a plantation and a home.

Rockefeller began winning friends in Latin America when he was first appointed coordinator for Latin American cultural and economic affairs by Franklin D. Roosevelt during the war. Later he became assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs under both Roosevelt and Truman and participated in writing the Treaty of Chapultepec, which bars Communism from the Western hemisphere. Yet he has now been discredited from visiting the country he is considered an adopted citizen.

Venezuela, the country which barred him, is considered one of the more pro-American countries of South America. It has just gone through a very orderly election, during which, by a very close vote, the Christian Democratic Party — Catholic and considered conservative — replaced the more liberal Democratic Action Party. The new President is Rafael Caldera, who has visited the United States a score of times and is considered pro-American.

Venezuela is the biggest exporter of oil to the United States; also the biggest exporter of iron ore to U.S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel. A group of American contractors, including Kaiser and Murchison, have just finished building Venezuela the hydro-electric Guri Dam, bigger than any dam in the Soviet Union.

The top Venezuelan engineer in charge of this project was educated at MIT; and most of the new leaders of Venezuela have either studied or lived in the United States.

—Reasons For Failure—

Inside reasons why the Rockefeller mission has been a failure are:

1. President Nixon's speech on student riots in which he made slurring remarks regarding Latin American education, calling it "one of the most inferior systems of education anywhere in the world." This was bitterly resented by every Latin American university.

2. President Nixon's speech on Pan American Day, April 14, struck a sour note. He kissed off the Alliance for Progress and gave no promises for further Pan American cooperation. Latin Americans, of course, remembered Nixon's own unfortunate experience when, as Vice President, he was heckled at San Marcos University in Peru and CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER: How Do You Start? — Music teachers across America are debating: Do you start the child off on Beethoven and then link that up with the Beatles or the soul music he's already hooked on? Or do you start with the child where he and his pop stuff are right now, and work up gradually to the classics?

Do you start with "do re mi" or do you start with spontaneous soundmaking, like tapping toes, jingling and humming?

Is some of the present anti-art dangerous? Should one teach children that random sound happenings are part of music — or just nonsense? Anyone with all the right answers, please send them to Music Educators National Conference, which recently discussed all of this dissonantly and without any harmonious resolution.

Treasury Frees Silver

The end to the ban on the melting and exporting of U.S. silver coins now is in effect. The announcement was made by Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy, who also said the Treasury will reduce the amount of silver offered at its weekly auction from 2 million ounces to 1½ million ounces.

This is a 180-degree turn-about from the recommendation of the Joint Commission on Coinage made in December. According to Kennedy, the basic situation that existed in 1968 has changed substantially, and the melting ban no longer keeps silver coins in circulation nor contributes to the Treasury's supply of silver coins, a prediction made by this column shortly after the ban was applied in 1967.

In effect, this means that the coin in your pocket is yours and you are free to do with it what you will within the law.

Lifting of the melting ban will bring relief to U.S. silver users. They have paid a high price for silver since 1967. Silversmiths can now obtain the metal from whatever silver coinage they may have reserved.

What the reversal will do to the silver market is anyone's guess since literally tons of silver dimes, quarters and half-dollars have been held out of circulation, waiting for melting restrictions to be lifted. One thing is certain; the price will not drop. If anything, it should show an appreciable rise when the manufacturers of silver plate and jewelry have consumed their supply.

Silver coins up to and including 1964 issues contain 90 per cent silver and 10 per cent copper.

A second recommendation by the commission agreed with Kennedy on a nonsilver dollar coin. Kennedy said, "I think this is an excellent idea and fully endorse it. Such a coin should be increasingly useful in the future, particularly in view of the steady expansion of the vending machine industry."

Off-hand, I can only think of one "vending machine" capable of consuming a dollar coin in one application—the slot machine.

I see no objection to a one-dollar coin, but if the weight remains consistent with the silver dollar, it will require 17 coins to equal one pound and it just isn't conceivable that the housewife is going to carry three pounds of one-dollar coins while shopping for groceries.

Kennedy points out that 760 million half-dollars have been minted with 40 per cent silver content and that few of these are in circulation. He infers hoarding of these pieces is due in large part to the future of silver and sees a similar fate for a silver dollar.

Actually, Kennedy half-dollars are not held for their silver content but rather as mementos by admirers of the late president.

I am personally aware of silver coin hoards in the amount of $25,000 in half-dollars alone and not one is a Kennedy half of either 90 or 40 per cent silver content. Most of these coins are held by persons completely unaware of the future of silver. I am sure any Eisenhower dollar coin will find the same resting place.

Today's hand was sent us by a reader in Madison, Wis. He didn't say how the hand was bid except to state that North was dealer and they only reached six spades. We can visualize any number of bidding sequences and that in the box is our guess as to how it went when the hand was played.

North's Blackwood four no-trump is typical good player bidding. Good players like to use Blackwood any time they have a good hand. North has a good hand and expects to go to six or seven in view of his partner's jump response to the one-club opening.

When South shows just one ace, North realizes that he is flying blind in a fog. Some North players might look at those two little hearts and settle for five, others would go to six on the theory that South would have to have the king of hearts or that a heart might not be led.

An expert would not use Blackwood with the North hand. He would simply raise the two-spade bid to three to see what South would do next. Of course, he wouldn't worry about the bidding dying below game.

South would merely continue to four spades. He had already served notice that he held a big hand but if North held the wrong cards for him four might well be the limit.

Now North would show that he was interested in a slam by bidding five diamonds, whereupon South would be able to bid five hearts to show first-round control of that suit. The five-heart bid would be enough for North. He would jump right to seven spades.

School's Out!

By BETTY CANARY

I had just finished scraping up some mashed chocolate-covered mints in the hall when I realized what day it was. The last day of school and I had not only mashed mints and a colony of ants after them. I was going to have another summer. And to think of the time I've wasted on thoughts about how terrible it was for people like Marie Antoinette.

Then there was the squishing of tennis shoes and they were upon me. "We're home!" they called with jolly voices.

"Are you starting an ant farm?" Babs asked. But I was armed with a spray bomb and had declared war.

"She's KILLING them!" Cissy screamed. "Murder!"

"Let's just call it an execution," I said. "Let's be rational."

"Let's give them a trial first," Tad suggested.

"Look," I said, "you kids go have a glass of juice or something and let me take care of the dirty work."

"That reminds me," Rick said. "Tad has been hiding orange juice again. There are four glasses of juice behind the curtain in the bathroom window."

"He said he drank his juice every morning," Cissy accused. "He's been lying again!"

"No, I haven't!" Tad shouted in rebuttal. "All mother ever says is 'I don't want to see that juice when you're finished with breakfast!' She never did say I had to DRINK it!"

"Come on," Stu said in conciliatory tones, "let's not start our vacation quarreling. After all, this isn't a battleground."

"Right," Rick said. "And it isn't a court room either."

"You are right, dear," I agreed. "This is our home."

"I wish it was summer camp," Babs sighed.

"I thought it was," Stu snarled. "You and Tad put that tent up in the basement and you've stolen some of my camping gear."

"I didn't know that," I said weakly.

"And they have a bucket of sand in the bathroom..."

"That's just for a beach when we use the boats!" Tad said defensively.

"Well," Cissy said, "There's nothing wrong with that..."

"I'll be the judge, if you don't mind!" I interrupted.

"But," she continued with her argument, "I vote against Babs keeping their toad in the toy box in MY room."

I didn't lose control. I did shake a bit and scream, "This is NOT a zoo!"

"I think it's like living in prison," Babs cried.

"More like a concentration camp," Tad mumbled as he started up the stairs, "complete with a warden and squealers."

And his father had to pick that time to come in from the office. "What's going on?" he called. "Sounds like a regular madhouse!"

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Keep Up Unending War Against Common Housefly

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

With no friends and countless enemies, the housefly has shown remarkable ability to survive. The adult lives only about 30 days but during this time the female usually lays over 100 eggs every four days. Counting "children," "grandchildren," etc., one female fly under ideal conditions could be the progenitor of over 5 trillion flies in one summer. From this it can be seen that, if a few are eaten by birds, a few more are swatted and a fair number succumb to insecticides, the survivors can close ranks and still look forward to a rosy future.

Since flies feed on filth and may carry disease germs to your table, the problem boils down to keeping them away from your food. From the community standpoint the best way to deal with them is to destroy their breeding places — manure piles in the country and uncovered garbage cans in the city.

In your home you should keep door and window screens in good repair. If any flies sneak past or through these barriers, track them down relentlessly with spray bomb, fly paper, trap or swatter. The disease you prevent may be dysentery, typhoid or the viral hepatitis that is becoming more prevalent each year.

Q — What causes Dupuytren's disease? Is there any cure for it?

A — I assume you are referring to Dupuytren's contracture. This is a progressive thickening of the strong fibrous sheath between the skin of the palms and the tendons of the hand muscles. The exact cause is not known but heredity seems to be a factor. The usual treatment is surgical correction. Recent studies show that prolonged stretching by a physiotherapist may be helpful.

Q — What is the cause of myelofibrosis with myeloid metaplasia? Can it be cured?

A — In myelofibrosis there is a spotty replacement of the bone marrow. Myeloid metaplasia is another name for this disease, the cause of which is unknown. Transfusions may be needed. Busulfan and male hormone are used in the treatment. In some victims, removal of the spleen is beneficial.

Because the small boy kept eating the putty, his mother put it up high in the cabinet. Hearing noises that sounded like things were going on in the kitchen that shouldn't be, she called in and asked him what he was doing. His answer wasn't very satisfactory so she went in.

There he was up on the cabinet.

"What are you going?" she wanted to know.

"Just putting the putty back where you keep it so I can't get it," he said. H. L.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Some guys have one for the road, but Joe Morgan had so many he doesn't want to leave.

The little second baseman for the Houston Astros belted three singles and a homer, starting four rallies that sent Houston to an 11-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Thursday night. But his 4-for-4 night only left him unhappy.

"I needed those hits. But I knew it... soon as I get hot, I have to leave for the Army. Tomorrow (Friday) is my last game before reporting," he said of his upcoming two weeks in the military reserve.

The rest of the major league teams took the day off, except for exhibition games in which

Atlanta beat its Richmond farm club 8-7. Pittsburgh dropped

Kansas City 4-2 and Minnesota edged its Denver farm team 4-3 and Vancouver of the Pacific Coast League upended Montreal

Morgan, once one of the brightest prospects in the National League before injuries slowed him in two of his four seasons in the majors, had been having his troubles at the plate and entered the game hitting only .232.

"I've been too anxious at the plate," he said after raising his mark to .249 and scoring four runs, giving him 38 for the year.

Waiting for his pitch against the Cardinals, he singled in the first inning to start a two-run burst, kicked off a three-run rally in the fifth with another single, opened a two-run sixth with his eighth home run and then completed his night with a single that began a clinching four-run eighth.

Now his problem is to keep his hot bat during his two-week military stint and then avoid the injuries that wrecked him for six weeks last season. Thus far,

he has been in all of Houston's

54 games.

The 5-foot-7, 150-pound dynamo, turned down by several teams because he was so small,

still managed to hit .285 in 1966 and .250 in 1968, although he got into only 10 games last year.

In his two full years, he hit .271 with 100 runs scored as a rookie

in 1965 and managed a .275

mark in 1967.

Morgan's safeties—he walked his other trip to the plate—helped the Astros end a four-game losing streak and dropped the disappointing Cardinals 11 games out of first place in the East Division.

Jim Wynn, batting behind

Morgan, reached base four times on two hits and two walks and also scored four times as Denis Menke drove in three runs and Norm Miller, John Edwards and Jesus Alou each knocked in two in the 13-hit

Baseball

Draft Into

Round Two

NEW YORK (AP) — Having

already selected 563 prospects,

major league baseball's 24

teams were prepared to draw into another pool of youthful talent today, hopeful of coming up with a few more choice pearls.

The Washington Senators, who had first pick in the free agent draft which began Thursday as a result of a last-place

1968 finish in the American League, will have to wait two weeks or so before they can sign

Jeff Burroughs, an 18-year-old high school slugging sensation from Long Beach, Calif. The price may go as high as $100,000.

"I'm definitely interested in signing if the price is right," said Burroughs, who hit five balls out of Anaheim Stadium

during a recent workout for

Washington manager Ted Williams.

Kit Instructions Hard; She Seeks Easier Method

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—My problem is frustration with the complicated instructions furnished with a recently purchased afghan kit. I want to make one that begins with a dark shade and graduates out in lighter shades and then has a final border of black. All of this would make a four-inch square which when joined with others would make the completed afghan.

I think beginners would understand more easily if someone would spell out each step and not assume that we know what is meant. Could someone experienced at crocheting help me and all the others who would like to crochet one of these beautiful afghans but are aghast at the instructions with commercial kits?—MARG, an editor

DEAR POLLY—This is in answer to Emily's question of how to treat and finish an old pot-bellied stove that she wants to use for a planter or for making a lamp. With a really stiff wire brush, I cleaned and brushed off all excess dirt and rust, inside and out. Next came a coating of one of the rust-preventive sprays, followed by one or two coats of flat black paint which could be either sprayed or brushed on. Mine looked lovely, has lasted for the past five years and still looks great as a planter. I am sure it would also make a lovely lamp.—MRS. F. B.

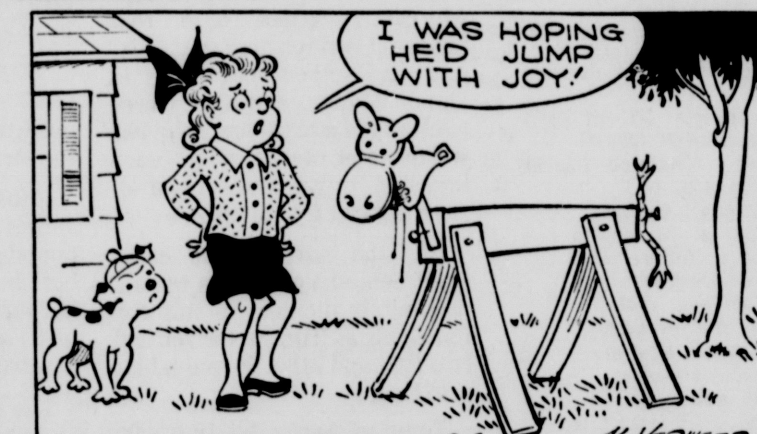

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Emily that my husband had our black pot-bellied stove sand blasted inside and out to remove all the rust. Then he painted it with dull wrought-iron paint. It was then made into a lamp by fitting a piece of wood (he used oak about an inch thick) in the place where the stove pipe came out, then fastened to it a brass rod and arm like a bridge lamp's. I bought a glass ash tray for less than 50 cents that just fits in the hole where a stove lid used to be. A planter could be put where I have this ash tray. He installed a small red light bulb inside. When turned on this glows through the slots in the front of the fire door as though there were a fire inside.—VIVA

Ann Landers

His 'Intern' Son Is Not Qualified

Dear Ann Landers: I don't want to make any trouble but I'd like to know if I have a justifiable complaint.

I went to the doctor last week for a flu shot. The nurse who I am accustomed to seeing in the office was home ill. The doctor introduced me to his 14-year-old son. He appeared to be a very pleasant lad. "Tom, is going to be a doctor," his father said with understandable pride. "He's learning to give shots." Then the doctor handed the needle to the boy. I was so stunned I just sat there. The boy did indeed give me the shot.

Isn't there a law to protect patients from this sort of thing? My annual physical examination comes up next month but I'm afraid to go back. Please tell me if the doctor is conducting his practice within ethical limits. — Appleton

Dear Apple: Only trained persons should be permitted to give shots. If something had gone wrong, the doctor would have been liable for a beautiful malpractice suit. What he did was highly unethical and most injudicious.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a guy—22, good build and what you might call an all-around athlete. Ever since I was a kid I've heard people say I'd be great looking if it weren't for my shnoz. I've been called Eaglebeak, Durante, DaNose and a few other names. My big nose never bothered me and it still doesn't, but now I've got a girl who keeps bugging me about getting plastic surgery. She says I'd look like Kirk Douglas if I had a straight, normal size nose. Honest, Ann, it isn't my life's ambition, but secretly I guess I'd like it.

My one big hangup is the ribbing I'd get. The guys would lay it on me till doomsday. What do you think? — Borneo

Dear Borne: If the only thing holding you back is the "guys"—go, boy, go. Of course you'd get a royal razzing but it would last for only a week or two, then they'd tire of the subject and talk about something else.

I sense you'd enjoy a normal size nose, so my advice is go ahead and get one.

Dear Ann Landers: This morning I opened the bread box and found half a pecan roll, an overripe banana, a sliver of cake, a plastic bag, two moldy oatmeal cookies and an empty saucer. No bread.

I'm a widow who shares an apartment with my mother (she's 63 and in good health.) I work and Mother stays home and keeps house, if you can call it that. I've told her repeatedly that sloppy housekeeping gets on my nerves. She says, "Don't be such an old maid."

Last night we had a few words about the bread box. Mother accused me of being crazy-clean and obsessed with unimportant details. Am I? — Tidy in Mobile.

Dear Tidy: Mothers are awfully hard to train, especially when they are over 60. No two women keep house alike, and obviously your mother isn't much of a housekeeper. Accept the fact that Mom is not about to change. When you run into things like the bread box, clean it yourself and say nothing.

Schaffner Purchasing Agent

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes named a new director for the state's largest patronage office Thursday.

James E. Schaffner, now state purchasing agent, will take over as acting director of revenue July 1. He succeeds Thomas A. David who was named to the new post of Highway Department administrator last week.

Schaffner, 43, will get a pay raise with the new position. He now makes $14,000 a year and will go to $19,000.

He said he did not know who would get the job of state purchasing agent, one requiring at least five years' experience in big quantity buying. Schaffner previously was purchasing agent and office manager for International Shoe Co.

The governor's latest move leaves open the question how patronage will be handled in the 1,500-man department. Schaffner said he would have to get acquainted with the job before he makes any changes.

Hearnes recently named Thomas C. Gilstrap, collector of revenue in the department, as overall patronage control administrator for his office.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Science Foundation says there is no scientific evidence that smoking marijuana is harmful or addictive.

In fact, says Dr. Leland J. Haworth, the information available now indicates the opposite may be true.

"It is our puritan ethics which says we shouldn't do this rather than science which says we should not, at the moment," Dr. Haworth told a House Appropriations subcommittee in testimony released today.

Haworth said it still remains a scientific problem to decide whether marijuana is dangerous to society. He likened it to alcohol and said a similar decision would have to be made if alcohol had just been discovered.

Similar statements touched off a controversy in 1967 when they came from a top health official in the Johnson administration.

Dr. James L. Goddard, a commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said then that as a physician he was not satisfied that medical justification existed to prohibit the use of marijuana.

He went further than Haworth, however, and condemned laws against the use of marijuana as too severe and medically unjustified.

Release of Haworth's testimony comes at a time when the government is in the midst of a nationwide campaign against marijuana and narcotics. Gerald N. Kurtz, director of the drive by the National Institute of Mental Health, said upon launching the campaign: "Our primary aim is to arm young people and their parents with the facts to help them resist pressures to experiment with drugs—marijuana and LSD."

Dr. Haworth, in his testimony to the subcommittee, said there is no scientific proof that the use of marijuana can lead to addiction to harder narcotics.

"This is a problem which requires very clear and insightful investigation of the facts," he said.

"The evidence that marijuana is addictive is not conclusive at all," he said. "Quite the opposite as far as I can make out."

Dr. Haworth said the use of the hallucinogenic LSD has dropped off sharply among young people since it was established that the drug can cause chromosome damage.

"As soon as they also became aware of the fact that numbers of them did not return from those 'trips' as they call them," he said, "they stopped taking it."

Persons under the influence of marijuana are as mentally unreliable as those who drink to excess, he said, but there is no scientific basis for determining the long-term effect of smoking marijuana.

Just last month the U.S. Supreme Court struck down two key laws under which the government prosecuted persons attempting to smuggle marijuana.
